

Associate of Applied Business

Computer Science Technology

Upon completion of the computer science technology major, students will have:

- Exposure to a breadth of computer science technologies and programs including networking, programming, database management, and web site development.
- Developed effective computer science skills, including the ability to learn new technologies, troubleshoot problems, create system requirements, evaluate systems, and document requirements and solutions.
- Developed effective communication skills, both written and verbal
- Developed an understanding of the role of the computer professional within an organization, including the basics of business accounting and economics, the ethical use of information and computer systems, and the professional understanding of an organization's goals, culture, and business.
- Developed respect for diversity and community
- Developed the ability to create, manage, and follow a plan that meets an identified goal.
- Obtained the skills necessary for future academic growth.