Baker University Center has always rocked the Athens music scene. Located in the Baker University Center that opened in the fall of 1953, The Frontier Room was a place to sip coffee and play the jukebox between classes. Beer was served, and at night, musical acts (such as the West Coast Ramblers and Hotcakes, both popular in the 1970s) took over the stage. The weekly Open Stage at the Bunch of Grapes room was once the longest-running open mic night in Athens. Today, the new Baker University Center (on Park Place) is still a great place to hear live music. Know the story behind this picture?
