Welcome from the Rural Women’s Studies Association (RWSA)

Join the Rural Women’s Studies Association (RWSA) for its 13th triennial conference. The theme, “Surviving and Thriving: Gender, Justice, Power, and Place Making,” emphasizes the role of gender in rural community formation and survival. Presenters will explore the ways that gendered identity (as women, men, or bi- and trans-) and raced identity (within separatist communities, segregated neighborhoods, or integrated spaces) affected personal power, individual choice, and community development historically and today. These subjects inform us about rural activism, business development, cultural expression, self-governance, and collective experiences locally, regionally, nationally, and globally.

The RWSA is an international association founded in 1997 to promote and advance farm and rural women’s/gender studies in a historical perspective by encouraging research, promoting scholarship, and establishing and maintaining links with organizations that share these goals. RWSA welcomes academic scholars, public historians and archivists, graduate students, and representatives of rural organizations and communities as conference participants and members.

Grandmothers and Granddaughters of the RWSA: What Generation Gap?
For thirty years, the Rural Women’s Studies Association has introduced historians to vibrant and important questions about the experiences of rural women across the globe. Scholars in this field have challenged assumptions about the theory and history of gender, race, environment, politics, family, economics, and community. They have encouraged historians to confront their urban/ metro-normative gaze when confronting contradictions and continuities in rural spaces. These scholars have also offered exciting possibilities for area studies, interdisciplinary studies, and scholars of sexuality and queer theory.
The “Granddaughters” seek to respond to the “Grandmothers” of RWSA, a generation of scholars whose pivotal work has provided the foundation for future scholarship. Each will note how the “Grandmothers” influenced their understandings of topics about rural women and offer commentary about the future of scholarship in the field.

Granddaughters:
Margaret Weber, Iowa State University
Kathryn Engle, University of Kentucky
Emily Prifogle, Princeton University
Sara Egge, Centre College

III-3 Rural Action, Inc.
Local Non-Profit Organization Dedicated to Revitalizing Appalachian Ohio

Rural Action (RA) was founded in 1992 as an organization focused on using the strategies of Asset Based Community Development to address the endemic issues of poverty and lack of opportunity in Appalachian Ohio. Rural Action utilizes a triple bottom line strategy in its programming—“Good for the Economy, The Community and the Environment”. One key partner of RA is Women Grow Ohio (WGO), a network of Women in Agriculture started by long time RA member Annie Warmke of Blue Rock Station in Muskingum County. Women Grow Ohio organizes women to women trainings and networks focused on the concept of the woman as the farmer, not the helpmate. They are a volunteer based group whose goals are Networking, Peer to Peer Education, Promotion and Sustainability. Their mission is to demonstrate the important work of Ohio women in feeding their families and others in our great state. RA staff and members of Women Grow Ohio will discuss their efforts to support women in agriculture.

1:00 to 2:00 pm – PLENARY Nikki Taylor, Driven toward Madness (Ohio University Press, 2016)

Introduction by Terri L. Snyder, California State University - Fullerton

Nikki Taylor is Professor of History and Department Chair at Howard University. Professor Taylor’s third book, Driven Toward Madness: The Fugitive Slave Margaret Garner and Tragedy on the Ohio (Ohio University Press, 2016), is a biography of Margaret Garner, an enslaved wife and mother who in 1856 escaped from slavery in northern Kentucky with her entire family. Garner’s reaction to her family’s recapture served as the inspiration for Toni Morrison’s classic novel Beloved.

2:15 to 3:45 pm – CONCURRENT SESSION IX

IX-1 Discussion Forum: Sharing Strategies for Creative Approaches to Community Development & Place Making

How do we turn buildings, roads and geographic features into vibrant places that nurture and support human collectivities? How do we build community through engaging with others and with our unique environments? This discussion forum provides a space for conference attendees to share their personal and local approaches to place-making. Forum hosts are especially interested in hearing from participants about context-specific strategies for:

- Developing and implementing community improvement or preservation projects
- Sustaining community engagement over time
- Making the work inclusive of different kinds of people

After mapping the opportunities and challenges we have in common, we will facilitate a discussion of next steps in place-based community revitalization that attends particularly to the things that make life beautiful.

Discussion Forum Participants:

- Barbara Bradbury, Hurricane Run Farm, a host WWOOF farm (World Wide Opportunities on Organic Farms) in southern Ohio; Shawnee State University
- Katherine Borland, Center for Folklore Studies, The Ohio State University
- Jody Newton McAllister, Friends of Scioto Brush Creek, Inc.
- Jenny Richards, Naturalist, Shawnee State Park
- Dawn Richards, Southern Ohio Medical Center

- Catharine Wilson, University of Guelph

Chair, Terri L. Snyder, California State University - Fullerton
IX-3 Panel Discussion: Rethinking and Remaking Place as Resistance

This facilitated, participatory session will address rural women’s experiences of cultural and institutional hegemony. We seek to demystify the operation of hegemony, to know it when we observe or experience it, and to develop and implement strategies of resistance. We will highlight current efforts to decolonize rural spaces by reclaiming/remaking/revaluing local culture, prioritizing the commons, and safe-guarding the common good. We situate efforts in an evolving ecofeminism that connects, both ideologically and structurally, the renewed and virulent patriarchal assault on women and the environment.

Panelists:
- Angie Carter, Michigan Technological University
- Betty Wells, Iowa State University
- Rashmi Attri, AMU Aligarh, India. Recorded video presentation of “Ecofeminism in Mamang Dai’s Writings” (in absentia)

Chair: Jenny Barker-Devine, Illinois College

4:15 to 5:45 pm - CONCURRENT SESSION X (continued)

X-3 Roundtable Discussion: Organizing Rural Women in Today’s Political Climate
Rural women have long engaged in politics. Women in northwestern Missouri invited Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton to speak for women’s suffrage. More recently, Black women in the South worked with little recognition to mobilize rural residents in the push for civil rights. Barbara Pini, Berit Brandth, and Jo Little’s Feminism and Ruralities (2015) and Jenny Barker-Devine’s On Behalf of the Family Farm (2013) examine the push made by other rural women, with a focus on the way they organized and what they fought for. Recently, renewed political urgency has led many women from behind their computer screens and away from the relative safety and anonymity of Facebook activism to real-world contentious, and loud public activism.

Panelists:
  Rural Women and Politicized Social Movements
  Jamie Campbell, Tulane University

  Mobilizing Democrats in Missouri and Texas: The challenges of Liberal Organizing in Rural, Conservative America Elyssa B. Ford, Northwest Missouri State University, Maryville; and Kelly McMichael, American Public University
