Dear faculty,

Bobcats Publish is a partnership between Alden Library and Ohio University Press to promote and encourage student publishing on campus.

Bobcats Publish will sponsor a student publications roundtable and fair in the Friends of the Library Room (third floor of Alden) on 24 March 2016 from 1:00 to 5:00 p.m.

We hope to bring many student writers, editors, and publishers in the same room to facilitate a conversation on all aspects of student publication at Ohio University.

We should very much appreciate it if you would share this information with your students who are actively publishing or may be interested in getting their work published in student journals, newspapers, or websites.

Each student publisher will be provided a table and the opportunity to present information about their publication and to participate in a roundtable discussion.

Students should contact the event sponsors for more information. The deadline to RSVP is February 5.

Questions and topics may include

- What should you know about copyright and publication agreements?
- How do you get your content published? And in what formats: print, digital, or both?
- What’s your business model?
- How do you get your content noticed?
- What kind of web presence should you have? How do you get it?
- How do you plan so that your publication will keep going once you graduate?
- Should you archive your content?

Contact Information:

MARC BLANC
mb859113@ohio.edu
Editor of Jettison
jettisonmag.com

or

GILLIAN BERCHOWITZ
berchowi@ohio.edu
Director and editor-in-chief
Ohio University Press
www.ohioswallow.com