Dr. Crystal L. Patil, PhD, is a medical anthropologist with a specialty in mixed methods and global health. The motivation for her research stems from a concern for social justice and the welfare of underprivileged/marginalized communities in the USA and globally.

Dr. Patil has conducted mixed-methods biocultural research in Africa and the urban United States. Her research focuses on how the immediate social world becomes embodied and expressed as health, illness or suffering.

Friday, April 7th, 2017
3:00 - 5:00 PM, Walter Hall 135

Sponsored by the Center for International Studies and the African Studies Program. For more information, contact the African Studies program: african.studies@ohio.edu