SCHOLARLY INTERESTS

My scholarship focuses on the communicative construction of possibility as individuals and groups organize for survival and social change amidst embodied differences. Guided by narrative, aesthetic, and feminist sensibilities, my work encompasses a range of issues including pediatric cancer care, disability-related concerns, and organizing care for underserved populations. The various strands of my scholarship are connected by several primary concerns: How do symbolic and material resources foster resiliency among individuals living in vulnerable bodies and circumstances? How do narrative logics function in therapeutic contexts? Under what conditions can storytelling foster (dis)empowerment in healthcare organizing and activism? Storytelling is at once a phenomenon of interest and a form of sharing knowledge claims. I am committed to engaged scholarship in which I work with community members to explore what stories do for individuals and groups and develop narrative-based interventions.
