NEW YORK
LETTER FROM THE EDITOR

Here on the pulse of this new day
You may have the grace to look up and out
And into your sister’s eyes, into
Your brother’s face, your country
And say simply
Very simply
With hope
Good morning.

On The Pulse of The Morning: Maya Angelou

And a “good morning” it is indeed! It’s the month of April, and a change of season is evident all around us. In compliance, friends, we are at the cusp of an historic moment in our lives, one so immense it will remain etched in our memories and in the annals of our country’s history. We are poised and ready to celebrate fifty years, with eyes looking “up and out” towards a future filled with promise for our beautiful country.

Where one year ago, Guyanese spent nail-biting moments as we awaited the outcome of an election decision that we prayed would reignite the fires of national pride, here one year later, many who left our shores and did not look back are turning around with compasses pointed homeward.

Social media has flooded every space it seems with event after event, for Guyana’s Golden Jubilee. Invitations swirl from each homeland Region for celebrations in that area and we are provided with agendas for time and place. Elsewhere and within the diaspora are Jubilee engagements within North America and the United Kingdom. This month’s magazine provides the schedule of some of these events.

It seems the floodgates have burst open with the artistry of young and old, known and unknown, all eager to serve up their patriotic offerings. The abundance of new product hitting the media is near-dizzying and we are taking it all in with so much pleasure. For those of you who will not make the physical journey home, the energy is as potent. Your involvement in the celebrations worldwide guarantees a “holistic” connection for you with home. Yes folks, “we reach home” in the true sense.

For the Guyana Cultural Association, the achievement of fifteen years as an Organization is our stamp of unwavering national commitment to you. Undiminished by the excitement of these times, our plans for this year’s Awards, our season of Queh–Queh, Folk Festival, and Symposium are as vigorous, “pumped up” by the success of past accomplishments. The call for Awards nominations is at our doorstep and we have begun to roll our sleeves up, to make this year as remarkable as the others – and better! We encourage and appreciate the submission of nominees who have shown true mettle and who are deserving of national recognition.

Have you visited our Cultural Arts Center. Why not plan on a visit, and get involved. Age is no stumbling block. Be a part of our newest project or help it to grow with your contributions.

Read on and enjoy.

Gail A. Nunes,
April Editor
O beautiful Guyana
O my lovely native land
More dear to me than all the world
Thy sea-washed, sun-kissed strand
Or down upon the borders
Looking out upon the deep
The great Atlantic
Blown into a fury, or asleep.
At morn, at noon - or better
In the crimson sunset’s glow
I love thee, Oh I love thee.

THE CARIBBEAN FILM ACADEMY & REWIND AND COME AGAIN LAUNCH THE INAUGURAL TIMEHRI FILM FESTIVAL

Showcasing Caribbean Film & Supporting Emerging Guyanese Filmmakers

The New York City based Caribbean Film Academy has teamed up with Caribbean-American culture blog Rewind & Come Again to present the inaugural Timehri Film Festival (TFF), which will run from May 18, 2016 – May 20, 2016 in Georgetown, Guyana, during the country’s Golden Jubilee which celebrates its’ 50th year of independence. Attendance to the three-day event will be free for film lovers and will celebrate Guyanese and Caribbean film with a full slate of short and feature length films, as well as offer a roster of film production workshops to up and coming filmmakers.

“After programming Caribbean films in New York for the past few years, it became evident filmmaking in Guyana is not progressing at the rate it is in other Caribbean countries. In addition, many of the great films being made in the Caribbean aren’t being seen by Guyanese audiences,” says TFF Director, Romola Lucas. She went on to add, “To date, there have been no real film festivals in Guyana. Being Guyanese myself, knowing we have many talented storytellers and wanting film to grow and thrive as an art in Guyana, we thought of starting a film festival there, as a way to fill both voids.”

The Timehri Film Festival is a unique destination festival with both screenings and workshops taking place at one of Guyana’s newest cultural centers, Moray House.

In addition to screening films from established directors and producers, TFF is also opening up a call for submissions. Filmmakers from Guyana, whether at home or abroad, are encouraged to submit their short films for consideration. Interested filmmakers should visit FILM FREEWAY, for more details and to submit their film. Submissions will be accepted until May 8, 2016.

As with many arts related ventures, financing a film festival is a challenge. We have been able to organize the Festival to this point with the help and support of our partner in Guyana, the Society Against Sexual Orientation Discrimination (SASOD) and a US-based sponsor, Blossoms of Guyana, both non-profit organizations working in the Guyanese community.

To help defray the remaining costs, the Festival is also launching a crowdfunding campaign on Indiegogo. All funds raised will be put toward Festival expenses – venue and marketing costs. Visit our INDIEGOGO CAMPAIGN to view and contribute to the campaign.

To stay up to date with the Timehri Film Festival, and for information on the films being screened and the screening schedule, visit our Website, like TFF on Facebook, Follow us on Instagram @TimehriFF and the hashtag #TimehriFF16.

Timehri Film Festival (TFF): TFF is an annual film festival with mission of showcasing the work of Guyanese and Caribbean filmmakers in the Region and Diaspora. The Festival will contribute to the continued growth of Guyana’s film industry by working to encourage and inspire emerging Guyanese filmmakers.

The Caribbean Film Academy (CAFA): Established in 2012, CAFA is a New York not-for-profit organization, dedicated to the promotion and support of Caribbean filmmaking and filmmakers, in the region and the diaspora. CAFA’s world is focused on promoting and sharing the art of storytelling through film from the unique perspective of the Caribbean.

Rewind And Come Again (RACA): Founded in 2008, RACA began as an online conversation about Caribbean-American life. The site has since grown to include content covering the expression of Caribbean culture throughout the diaspora. Dedicated to digging beneath stereotypical representations of the region, RACA works to shine a light on and spark conversations about the evolution of the Caribbean experience.

Ras Michael Jeune: Rootsman to the Bone; Artistic to the Core

Dr. David Hinds

Ras Michael Jeune was my friend, my mentor, my brother. In a little wooden house at Buxton-Friendship Line Top he taught me and others how to write and read poetry and how to write period. He taught us drama and storytelling and short story writing. He is for me Guyana's best short story writer of his generation. He was a dub-poet before dub poetry was popular. He had a knack for capturing the rhythm of the people in his art.

Mike introduced me to the poetry/chant of Andre Tanker and the artistry of Ken Corsbie, Marc Matthews, Johnny Agard and Henry Muttoo. It was he who explained to me that Walter Rodney was an artist too and that Kwayana had that touch of genius.

I remember how he got us little boys and girls of the 1970s Buxton into his poem—You Black like me/ You Poor like me/ And poverty is yuh Legacy. That poem opened my eyes at a very young age to the intersection of Race and Class and the consequences for the lives of people around me. Rupert Roopnarine would capture Mike doing that poem in his film, “The Terror and the Times”

Mike never gave me the impression that he cared for formal politics; he was never a political activist in that sense. His political activism was in his art—his varied art. Even when he was talking to you about regular life he was making art—the organic artist.
Mike was also a teacher in the formal system. He taught at Kwayana’s County High turned Republic Cooperative High School in Buxton. His students had a broader understanding of English Literature than the rest of us. He took his artistry into the classroom and it made a difference.

Michael was steeped in political reasoning; always reaching for philosophy. He was the first person to clarify for me the meaning of democracy and dictatorship—it came out in an argument he had with a “lil hot hand” name John Cromwell. He and John would remain lifelong friends. I learned about political art from him; he was always making a political point in his work— a cultural worker who stood on the side of the poor and oppressed.

Our recent conversations were long and varied—about capitalism, culture and art and about Guyana. Our last one occurred a few months ago on a Friday morning around 2 ‘o clock on Friendship Middle Walk, Buxton, in front of Andrew Night Spot. He gave me a treatise on how politicians change when the get into office. He was glad the government had changed but he was not optimistic about Guyana. I often think about how Guyana’s politics have destroyed optimism in our best products. Mike’s parting words to me were “Twilly it’s your responsibility to restore Buxton and Black People to the place that made it possible for you to chant like you doing.” I told him I am always willing to help. I knew his message was less about me and more about the condition of our people—that there was and is another way. He promised me to write something for the young people in Buxton fusing Emancipation and Independence for this year’s Emancipation observances in the village. I don’t know where he was with that project at the time of his death.

I love you Mike. Go back to your ancestors and continue your work of the mind and of poor people looking to break free. This year’s Emancipation at Buxton Line Top would not be the same without your voice. But the first libation will be for you.

Rootsman to bone. Artistic to the Core.

And, yes Ras Michael Jeune earned and deserves a National Award for his contribution to Guyana.
Some years ago, while in the Stabroek Market area of Georgetown, I almost got shell shocked when a 'youth man' addressed me as "BIG MAN". I've never been in a war zone, but that "BIG MAN" salutation was like an H-Bomb which had exploded right in front of me. It was the very first time that someone had addressed me like that, and it took some weeks before it finally sunk in, that I was never going to be a young man again. Never again would the Media refer to me as the "rising YOUNG playwright." Never again. I was now a "BIG MAN." I was now an Elder. Thankfully, many years previously, I had read in a magazine, that there are "Ole men" and there are "Elderly Gentlemen." So, I decided that I would not ever consider myself as an "Old Man", but instead, as an "Elderly Gentleman", as the years, like "Ole Man River", continue to, "just keeps rolling along". Right now, I am enjoying my 70s during Guyana's 50th.

During my late teen years and into my early twenties, I was involved in the Theatre Guild of Guyana. There were members of all age groups in that prestigious theatre organization. Many were people who held high office in the Public and Private Sectors in the then British Guiana. There were managers, there were doctors, there were lawyers, there were professors; there were also quite a number of expatriates who were members of the Theatre Guild of British Guiana. And most importantly, there were many members of a certain age group; they were many older folks who were active members of the Theatre Guild of those Colonial years, and they mentored the younger ones. One of my greater achievements during those early years at the Theatre Guild, was winning the Best Actor Award at the National Drama Festival of 1963, which was staged at the Playhouse, and at which St. Lucian Poet and Dramatist Derek Walcott, was the Adjudicator.

Those older members of the Theatre Guild were mentors of us the younger ones, and taught us many of life's enduring lessons. To always be on time being a principal one.
Frances Quamina Farrier

Shows at the Theatre Guild always started on time. Always, except the time when a particular late start was part of the show. It was one of the annual satirical shows entitled, "On the Brink", in which the first skit was about the recently arrived Governor Sir Richard Luyte, who's name was pronounced as "late". So that late start was a spoof on Sir Richard (Late). The English actor, Michael Norsworthy, who played the governor, entered after that late start with auditorium lights down and stage lights up. Michael walked swiftly from stage left, made a sudden stop at stage center, and looking embarrassingly at the audience, stuttered, "Sorry I'm Late". The laughter and applause lasted for over one long minute, and was probably heard all the way to the seawalls. The Theatre Guild Brink Shows were the fore-runner of Ron Robinson’s Theatre Company’s annual Link Show, which has entertained audiences for over thirty years. I had the opportunity of performing in both "Brink" and "Link".

Growing up in the then McDoom Village, neighbouring Agricola, on the East Bank of Demerara, I lived in a culture in which Elders were well respected. A male over forty was addressed as "Uncle" or "Neighbour" by teens and pre-teens. A female of a certain age, was addressed as "Auntie" or "Neighbour". So when I got submerged in the Theatre Guild culture where everyone, irrespective of age or stage, could be addressed by their first name without any 'handle', I was very uncomfortable. It took quite a while for this country boy, to grasp and accept that "First Name" theatre culture. However, what was very important, was that along with the first name, came respect; a respect which was vertical in that horizontal group of humanity. The older members of the Theatre Guild showed respect for the younger members and they, the older members, received that respect two-fold in response from the younger members.

In more recent years, as Guyana travelled closer and closer to our 50th. Independence Anniversary Jubilee Year milestone, I realized that I was "Growing Old Gracefully". At least, that is how I saw myself. I began to find myself being asked for advice more than had been happening previously, and I began to give advice more freely - whenever asked. Then one day, it dawned on me, that I was not going to be an "Old Man". I was going to be "An Elderly Gentleman." I was going to have clean and active fun in my older years, which I can physically and intellectually manage, as I approached that Biblical "four score and ten", and beyond. And why not! I am now 78 and doing many of the things which bring me joy, and which bring joy to others; especially doing my Storytelling and Poetry Performances, not only in Guyana but also overseas. I thank God that I have already lived longer than some of my boyhood peers. For over fifteen years, during the mid 1980s and into the late 1990s, I had interviewed hundreds of older persons for my weekly Radio Show, "The Eighty Plus Club", and I learned quite a lot about life and living in Guyana and those other countries where I interviewed Elders for The Eighty Plus Club.

In that half hour Sunday broadcast Radio programme, I interviewed Elders from all the ten Regions of Guyana; from Mabaruma in the very north of the country, to Aishalton in the deep south Rupununi. I also interviewed elders in all of the Caricom countries; from Suriname to Antigua to Belize and to The Bahamas. I also interviewed older folks in the USA, in Canada, in Britain, in Australia and in New Zealand. The oldest person was Matilda Lewis of Georgetown, Guyana; she was 95 at the time I had interviewed her, but I kept in touch with her over the next eighteen years of her life. She passed away at age 113 being the oldest known person in the Caribbean and South America at the time. She had maintained her mental faculties up to the very end. Matilda Lewis was also one of those special persons who lived across three centuries - the nineteenth, the twentieth and the twenty first centuries.

One of the happiest moments I had with one of the hundreds of members of The Eighty Plus Club, was dancing with centenarian Ethlene Dates, at State House, in Georgetown. At 100 years of age, she still had her teen-age figure and danced with such grace! We were Special Guests at State House on the occasion of the fiftieth Wedding anniversary of President Cheddi Jagan and First lady Janet Jagan. That evening, my dancing with Ethlene Dates almost stole the show from the Hosts. In more recent times, at age 78, I have been doing shows mainly of Poetry and Storytelling. The most recent were at the Playhouse, the National Library in Georgetown, a number of schools in Region #3, and the Burtonsville Library in Maryland, USA.

I do not know whether I will live to be 113 like Mathilda Lewis, or even become a centenarian like Ethlene Dates. But what I do know, is that I will continue to consider myself, not as an "Old Man", but as an "Elderly Gentleman", as I enjoy my senior years, and as Guyana continues its journey "Onward, Upward" to it’s 75th Independence Anniversary. Will I be around at that time? Will you be around at that time? Who knows!
Guyanese actor, dramatist, poet and academic Michael Gilkes wrote the play The Last of the Redmen for actor Clairmonte Taitt, his friend and colleague in the theatre. They both built their early career during the first decade of the Theatre Guild in Georgetown and worked together again several years later in Barbados. The original intention was that Taitt would perform the play, which was quite fitting since it is actually his fictionalised biography, (but Gilkes ended up performing it himself). Very thinly disguised, it is, among many other things, a documentary of the legendary Woodbine House in Cummingsburg, Georgetown, owned by the talented Taitt family and about the generations of artistic activity at which they were the centre as hosts, facilitators, producers and performers.

This complex drama often makes nostalgic journeys to the culture and society of Georgetown’s coloured middle class in a colonial era with a strong emphasis on art and achievement. Such visits are reminiscent of similar flashbacks to the past in another of Gilkes’s works, the collection of poems Joanstown, which has its own share of autobiography. It paints portraits of the Kingston district in a garden city whose character has changed and whose dissipated values remain immortalised only in art and literature.

My Life, My Country by Helen Taitt is another document that shares those qualities with Gilkes’s works. It is very closely related and treats the same subjects as the play because it is the autobiography of Clairmonte Taitt’s sister, Helen, who made the theatre her life-long career, performing, composing and teaching right up to the end of her life. She was Guyana’s best known, most accomplished and acclaimed professional dancer, and was also a choreographer, writer, dance instructor, and a specialist in ballet. She sketches the history of Woodbine House, its cultural activities, theatrical productions and the distinguished roll call of some of Guyana’s foremost artists who were its guests, or who performed or exhibited there.

Taitt scrupulously avoids dates in her account; it is remarkable for the absence of any citation of precise log or diary entries of when any event took place. But despite that minor observation, the text provides another priceless document of British Guiana before the war. She is a first-hand witness of the existence and conditions on the Corentyne sugar estates and their adjacent villages.
She covers the same social history treated by Gilkes, giving a personality to old Georgetown and bringing to it the testimony of one who was personally involved as a member of the celebrated Taitt family. To increase its value, this book is the only true record in existence of the life and work of one of the nation’s most remarkable artists.

It covers decades of her experiences travelling and working in the USA, Europe and the Caribbean, ending when she eventually returns with the intention of resettling in Guyana just after October 1992. She first left home for training in social work at university in Jamaica, then again to study dance at Balanchine’s School of American Ballet in New York, and later to pursue her career further afield. Among the schools, studios and companies she set up were the Berlin Art Circle, the Barbados Art Circle and the Taitt Dance Theatre.

Janet Jagan, to whom Taitt entrusted her autobiography (originally submitted as a weekly serial in the Mirror (January 10 to May 16, 1993)), adds an introduction which helps to place the book (published 2006 and reprinted 2008) and the life of its author in useful perspective.

Helen Taitt was a writer as well as dancer, choreographer, instructor, manager, and directed many of her stage productions. My Life, My Country is remarkable for the quality of its narrative. Taitt, who also wrote poems, exhibits a consciousness of craft and turns out a book whose narration is worthy of fiction after the fashion of Denise Harris or even Pauline Melville in her employment and control of occasional humour.

There are several very interesting and revealing accounts. Perhaps Taitt’s best known dramatic work is the musical Stabroek Fantasy which has long been attributed in perhaps all the records to another author. Taitt recalls its creation at her home Woodbine House. “One morning I awoke with the details of an entire show in mind... nothing like that had ever happened to me before! The story centred around a group of Georgetown, Stabroek Market hucksters, and I called it Stabroek Fantasy. Scene by scene came as if I had seen it all before. It was very successful” with music by Hugh Sam, and attracted the interest of radio and an American film company. She performed it with “a group of twelve young people and called us Theatre 13... Unfortunately the belief that thirteen was an unlucky number was upheld in this case. At our first meeting after the performances, we were informed by number 13 that she had sent my script to Washington DC and copyrighted Stabroek Fantasy in her name!”

In another chapter she describes the finding/founding of Woodbine House which was to become so important in Guyana cultural history, discovered on Murray Street when her father, Government Medical Officer Dr Taitt, was transferred to Georgetown and her mother went house hunting. There are accounts of productions involving the work of several of the country’s most famous artists in whose early development the house played a part. They involved Arthur Seymour, Stanley Greaves, Ron Savory, Hugh Sam, Wilbert Holder, Cicely Robinson, the Police Male Voice Choir and the Woodside Choir.

Of much significance was the discovery of Philip Moore. “When I was a Welfare Officer on the Corentyne Coast, I came across a cottage covered in carvings and paintings. It was the home of our own Philip Moore, and I decided that Guiana must see his creations. Happy indeed I was when at last I brought them to Georgetown and built a shed to house them at the Guiana Art Centre, where they excited much interest during a month-long ‘Jamboree of Arts’ at which he taught wood carving.”

Helen Taitt’s life story is that of one who persevered, realizing her determination to be a professional dancer and pursuing a long career in Germany (mainly), the USA, France, Holland, Switzerland, Dominica, St Lucia, Barbados and Guyana. She also tells how her residency in Germany began. “The German Ambassador in Georgetown offered me a three-week visit to Germany as a guest of his government... It was quite enjoyable being a real VIP for the first time in my life and I made the most of it.”

The details of her career as a ballet dancer make impressive reading with its story of professionalism, undisputed talent, recognition and achievement. But it also bears a sub-text of the potentially world-conquering fame that could have been hers were it not for the consistent and repeated acts of racism that definitely interfered with her career and advancement. She tells many tales of open admission of her superior talent and proficiency, accompanied by confessions by white agents that there was no place for a non-white ballet dancer on the American stage.

Lady Rose returned to her country of birth, England in February, 1988 after working for some 18 years at the Mahaica Hospital.
US BASED GUYANESE TRACK ATHLETES ON THE ROAD TO RIO

The women’s 4x200m relay victory at the Armory Track Invitational in New York on February 7th of this year signals the resurgence of Guyana’s track and field in a big way. The team of Kadecia Baird, Alita Moore, Melissa Caddle and Shenika King ran away with our hearts and the win, beating both the USA and France. Each week since then, Guyanese athletes have posted world ranking performances.

The world’s highest ranked athlete is Troy Doris in the triple jump. His leap of 16.75 meters is the 15th furthest jump in the world. Barely off the Olympic qualifier, will Troy be focusing on outdoor competitions to make his mark and secure his trip to Rio, Brazil, venue of the 2016 Olympics. Just behind him is Jermaine Griffith in the 400m. His time of 46.39 on March 6th set a new mark for the Guyanese national indoor record, and catapulted him to the 33rd spot in the world.

Guyana’s outdoor 400m record holder, Winston George, posted 47.13 in his indoor debut at the Valentine Invitational in Boston. He also won the Armory’s World’s Last Chance meet on March 6th. Another 400m runner - Jason Yaw - also in his first indoor season, posted a best time of 47.65. Yaw, George and Griffith were to team up with Stephan James to compete in the 4x400 relay at the World Championships in Portland on March 18-20.

Unfortunately, the team was scratched at the last minute due to an injury James’ suffered.

The short-distance sprinters - Adam Harris and Jeremy Bascom posted season best times of 6.77 and 6.71 respectively in the 60m. Harris, Guyana’s Olympian from 2008, will be the lone representative at the World Championships later this month.

On the women’s side, Kadecia Baird, Guyana’s junior national record holder over 400m recorded a season best time of 54.35 on the way to her win at the Fastback Invitational at Ocean Breeze, Staten Island. Shank King, daughter of weightlifter Shondell King, was fourth in the Big East in the 400m, representing St. John’s University on February 28th. A week later, she was 4th at the ECAC championships in Boston, and lowered her personal best time to 55.72. Brenessa Thompson set personal best performances in both the 60m and 200m at the SEC championships on February 27. Her times of 7.49 (60m) and 24.01 (200m) were good for 22nd in both events. All the athletes are scheduled to compete at the Aliann Pompey Invitational on June 18th at the National Track Stadium in Leonora in Guyana.

*We are extremely proud of these athletes and ask that you support them in whatever way you can, particularly in this year of Guyana’s Golden Jubilee.
