

John Cady, an Ohio University professor of history, helped create the first Southeast Asian area of study for universities in America.

Donald Clippinger started as a professor of chemistry at Ohio University in 1928 and was the dean of the graduate school from 1958 to 1965.

Ohio University Named Fellowships

Up to five fellowships, funded through the Graduate College, are available annually. Each award carries a fellowship in the amount of $2,000 per semester (fall and spring).

Claude Kantner came to campus as director of the School of Dramatic Arts and Speech in 1946. He played a major role in the creation of the College of Communication and in planning for the Speech Building, which was renamed in his honor when he retired in 1972.

Anthony Trisolini, a former dean of the College of Fine Arts, was respected throughout the community of Athens and at the University as a teacher, critic, director and performer in the Ohio University Theater and the Ohio Valley Summer Theater and as a member of many University committees concerned with service and scholastic pursuits.

Graduate College: Ohio University is classified by the Carnegie Foundation as a highactivity research institution and is regularly among the top 20 Fulbright producing doctoral/research universities.

Review and Announcement of Finalists

The Graduate Council Student Affairs and Fellowships Committee reviews submitted materials. The Committee reserves the option to request additional information or conduct personal interviews. Following its deliberations, the committee will make its recommendations for the recipients of the fellowships to Graduate Council. Fellowship recipients will be posted on the Graduate College website after Graduate Council's review and selection.

Named Fellowship nominations can come from any department/school, but each department/school is limited to one nomination.

Named Fellowships are not tied to any particular discipline.
